

LIBRARIANS AROUND THE WORLD

“Librarians Around the World” is an online project where 34 participants from 19 countries have written an article about their study and work experience, about the library system, association in their country or some interesting projects that they have, even about problems that they have (no funding for library, expensive studies, struggle to find work, etc.!) The manager of this project is Elina Sniedze. The articles are being edited by Sheryl Anspaug and will be published as an e-book in English and Latvian.

“I learned the power of stories - to create connections and see the world in different perspectives, to imagine, create, share new and fresh ideas, and to make the world a better place one chapter at a time.”

Darrel Manuel O. Marco, Philippines

As per one of Ranganathan's laws of library science, “Save the time of the reader”, a lot need to be done in Tanzania so as to equip necessary technologies that can support timely service delivery to users with remote access as well.

Joseph Andrew Mhando, Tanzania

Since I am working in one small public library and I was trying to demonstrate it is not an obstacle to have successful career even at international level.

Daniela Skokovic, Serbia

The aim of project is to promote librarian profession and to create an e-book about librarians, library system and education in different countries to educate students and librarians about libraries around the World. To tell high school students about librarian profession, to tell government about our problems, to make the world see that there are lots of awesome librarians out there. To show that we read (but not only!), do researches, attend conferences, create awesome projects, also that we have parties and that sometimes one librarian has to be as an orchestra - to manage and do everything - create events, catalogue books, buy new books, research, design, sing, dance, act, etc.

Let's show the world that there are libraries and we need them!

The book editing is in progress. Please follow the project updates and get a free copy of an e-book here
